 Senator Tilling on Friday made public a letter to J. William Thur-mond, United States district attorney at Greenville, S. C., in which the South Carolina senator said he was glad a warrant had been issued for A. Geilfuss, a Spartanburg baker, who is charged with receiving goods stolen from the government. Senator Till-man said also that he thought Gell-luss would welcome a grand jury investigation.

From Bethlehem in Judea youthful British soldier writes to a friend in London. The president has decided in favor of publishing at once the names and addresses of soldiers figuring in the casualty lists. The practice of giving asualty lists. The practice of giving names only has proven very unsatisfactory for various reasons, among them the fact that in such a large army there are so many people of the same name. An interesting case in point came to the attention of the writer not long ago. Sheriff Quinn and his brother, Robert E. Quinn, were reading over a casualty list in were reading over a casualty list in which appeared the name of R. E. Quinn, and if R. E. But the south wants fair treatment. Cotton is not, and has not, been as high in proportion as the other commodities that are absolutely necessary in its production, and besides that, it is about the only commodity that the people of this section has to offer for other commodities. The greater portion of the government's war expenditures go to the munition manufacturers of the northeast and northwest and that leaves the people of the and that leaves the people of the south in the position of paying out a great deal more than they can get back. According to our view of the matter unless the people of the south get more than twenty cents for their cotton, they cannot continue to pro-duce this commodity.

— British losses in men killed, wounded, captured and missing on the Western front since the German offensive began March 31 are estimated by the Plitish mission in Washington at nearly 250,000. This estimate would appear to be in remarkable contrast to the enormous German losses in the drive. The German war ofses in the drive. The German war ofses in the drive. The German war ofses in the great battle have consider it nothing but justice to this writer to go beyond that. Their merit is attested by the fact that several of the best newspapers in the state have been reproducing these letters in whole or in part, some of them on their editorial pages. Hon. J. E. Mc-Donald of Winnsboro, was kind enough to say a few days ago that both from the standpoint of literary character and human interest, these letters were superior to anything of the kind he superior to anything of the kind he had seen anywhere, "And," he declared, "they should be published in a book, for permanent preservation."

Among other places visited was the artillery dugouts and trenches. The infantry trenches are quite interesting but as compared with the trenches and dugouts of the artillery section, they are but playhouses. The artillery trench is entered almost at a level, and by successive steps and twists and turns one finally finds himself underturns one finally finds himself under-ground some twenty-five or thirty feet. Some of the trench system is open at the top, and some of it has been covered over with timber. boards and wire and camouflaged with leaves, dirt, grass, etc. The artillery trench at Sevier would probably take are of two or three batteries.

There was a baseball game in progress on the grounds Sunday morn-ing. A team representing the 11th were the contestants just at the time. The aviators included some extra good ball players and easily defeated the

Every regiment at Sevier has its own regimental band and every one of these organizations has been brought o a high state of perfection as each is in charge of a leader of ability and he keeps the boys on the job some five or six hours a day. Sunday after-noon one of these bands gave a connoon one of these bands gave a concert in the big auditorium in Greenville. There were possibly 1,500 to 1,800 people who heard the music.

There were more visitors to Camp Sevier during Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday than there has been since the camp was established. They came from Tennessee, North and South Carolina and a few other states. Mothers and fathers, wives, children and sweethearts were there in droves and Greenville was crowded to the extreme limit. Securing a room, a bed or even a cot in a hotel was all but impossible, and unless one had friends who could accommodate him, or rank strangers were charitable, the visitor had a hard time of it. He had nothing to say against the poor creatures who were running the show. He did not consider them responsible. His view was that the shame of it all rests upon the own council, which is actuated only by greed for money.

BETTER PAY FOR TEACHERS

The trustees of the rural schools of York county have put themselves on record as recognizing the justice of ore adequate compensation for efficient teachers, and have pledged themselves to use their best efforts to im prove the situation as to salaries as ar as possible.

This was the most important de velopment of a county meeting of the trustees which assembled in the courthouse on the call of Superintendent of Education Carroll last Saturday, Another outcome of the meeting was a recommendation for careful consideration of the idea of releasing the children for fall farm work by holding a two months' school term during the Aviation section and another representing the 195th Ammunition Train, or approximately during that period. Also there was adopted a resolution approving and endorsing the estabishment of the state bureau for the appointment of teachers. Notwithstanding the fact that it was a good day for farm work, and there were few other visitors in town during the morning, there was a large attendance of trustees. There was present more than fifty of them from all sections of the county and all bu eight or ten of the fifty-seven districts were represented.

The meeting was called to order by Superintendent of Education Carroll and was addressed by that official and also by Dr. W. S. Stokes, registrar of the South Carolina Teachers' Employ-ment bureau, representing State Su-perintendent of Education Swearingen, and by Prof. J. W. Thomson of Win-throp. Also there was informal fre-discussion of various questions by dif-ferent trustees, who evidenced a deep and intelligent concern in the problems confronting the schools.

Carroll said he felt like making an Wilkerso some common ground with reference to the employment of good teachers. The pay of teachers, good teachers, has all along been too low, he said; but now since there has been such a startling advance in the cost of living, this pay has grown to be ridiculous. He new of cases of good teachers who after having worked hard over a long school term during which they lived as economically as possible, were obliged to send to their parents or other relatives to get the money with which to return home. He did not want to be understood as recommend-ing an indiscriminate raise of salaries. regardless of efficiency, as inefficien eachers were not cheap at any price but it is very well to recognize fact that we cannot continue to cure efficient teachers at the old of salaries, because there is too muc demand for them and too much opportunity for them in other lines of work. Mr. Carroll quoted President Wilson as saying that whatever we do in this war, we must continue the support of our schools, and while it is quite possible that some sections of the state may fall by the wayside in the stress that is creeping upon us, he hoped that this would never have to be said of York county. Continuing to another phase of the situation, Mr. Carroll referred to the fact that last fall many farmers found it necessary to take their children out of the schools to help gather their crops and there was reason to anticipate that this same thing would happen to a greater extent next fall. He had never found any satisfaction in divided school terms. It meant inconvenience and loss of time in getting started, etc., but under a situation where it looked like a summer term or none at all the question of a summer term was orth serious consideration.

Stokes, who said he had been closely identified with school work al his life and who was personally acquainted with a large portion of the people in the state, explained that he had come up as the representative of Mr. Swearingen, who was unable to be present, because of an engagement elsewhere. He paid a high tribute to Mr. Swearingen's work in connection. Mr. Swearingen's work in connection

Prof. J. W. Thomson, who had dropped into the meeting on his way back to Winthrop from the western part of the county, was called upon by the chairman, and offered a few pointed observations. He agreed with both the preceding speakers on the salary question; but went on to offer the suggestion that the trustees might do a great would not serve under any consideration, Mr. W. B. Before proceeding to the election of delegates to the state convention, W. B. Wilson, Jr., offered a resolution providing that since York county is entitled to ten delegates, the convention elect one delegate, from each of the nine townships and one delegate at large.

Dr. I. J. In cases where teachers prove inefficient they should not be dismissed with recom-

The matter of summer terms was discussed at length and although it appeared that all of the trustees who spoke on the subject recognized the disadvantages of such terms, under ordinary circumstances, still, as a matter of expediency, it was decided to recommend summer work to the care-ful consideration of the trustees of the
